SDSU Land Acknowledgment

We stand upon a land that carries the footsteps of millennia of Kumeyaay people. They are a people whose traditional lifeways intertwine with a worldview of earth and sky in a community of living beings. This land is part of a relationship that has nourished, healed, protected and embraced the Kumeyaay people to the present day. It is part of a world view founded in the harmony of the cycles of the sky and balance in the forces of life. For the Kumeyaay, red and black represent the balance of those forces that provide for harmony within our bodies as well as the world around us.

As students, faculty, staff and alumni of San Diego State University we acknowledge this legacy from the Kumeyaay. We promote this balance in life as we pursue our goals of knowledge and understanding. We find inspiration in the Kumeyaay spirit to open our minds and hearts. It is the legacy of the red and black. It is the land of the Kumeyaay.

Eyay e'Hunn My heart is good.

About

SDSU's Black Resource Center (BRC) strives to promote Black Excellence and to provide a safe and welcoming environment where students, staff, and faculty of the African diaspora can congregate, collaborate, and cultivate a unified community. The BRC provides a space where we can reflect upon, honor, and celebrate our past and present as well as plan for our future. Through strategic and ongoing collaborative efforts, the BRC promotes intellectual exploration and academic achievement through educational, scholarship, and research initiatives; professional and career development strategies; and leadership and service opportunities.

The Black Resource Center promotes and is governed by the seven principles of the Nguzo Saba: Umoja (unity), Kujuchagulia (self-determination), Ujima (Collective Work and Responsibility), Ujamaa (Cooperative Economics), Nia (Purpose), Kuumba (Creativity), and Imani (Faith). We are intentional in fostering relationships with students, faculty, staff and the community. We are committed to building a stronger SDSU community together. We will define ourselves for ourselves by developing educational programming to enrich our understanding of our African culture. We will work together to support and nurture undergraduates, graduates, faculty and staff: "We are because I am; I am because we are. We will support Black businesses. Our purpose is to know, understand, and fulfill our mission. We will fulfill our mission by encouraging our students, staff and faculty to be creative and leave our world more beautiful than we found it, and finally, faith. We believe in our Creator and one another.

About

Overview and Mission Statement

Created out of student activism in 2003, the Center for Intercultural Relations has historically served as the intersectional space for students with multiply marginalized (Hill Collins 1990) identities at SDSU. Today, the Center seeks to support the academic, personal, and professional success of historically underrepresented and underserved students at San Diego State University. The Center continues to serve students with multiply marginalized identities through intrusive advising, access to basic needs, and academic success programming.

Vision

By eliminating barriers to academic success the Center for Intercultural Relations is designed to decrease retention and graduation equity gaps for historically underrepresented and underserved students. The CIR fosters an environment where students with multiply marginalized identities can be successful at SDSU and beyond.

Goals

1. Support students' academic, personal, and professional success.
2. Cultivate students' growth, self-discovery, and self-efficacy skills through academic coaching.
3. Remove barriers to academic success by identifying and supporting students' basic needs.
4. Promote health and wellness as a vital part of student success.
5. Foster students' sense of belonging to the Center and the campus community.

About

Making the most of counseling

To a large degree, the progress you make in counseling will depend on your active and genuine involvement. Here are some things you can do to enhance your experience in counseling:

- Attend all of your scheduled counseling sessions, or let your counselor know if you have to miss an appointment.
- Honestly and openly voice your thoughts and feelings in counseling.
- Between sessions, think through the concerns you are addressing in counseling.
- Complete your counseling homework assignments.
- Experiment with new and positive ways of doing things and thinking about things.
- Give your counselor feedback about how counseling is going.
- Join a counseling group or workshop

You may request, or your counselor may suggest, that you join a counseling group or workshop. C&PS groups are typically comprised of six to eight students with a range of concerns and personal growth goals, and are led/co-led by one or two group therapists on staff. We have found that many students can profit from group counseling and workshops, particularly when their areas of concern arise in relationships with other people. It can be a powerful learning experience to realize that others share some of the same struggles and can offer insights and feedback as well as support.

About

FIRST-GENERATION COLLEGE STUDENT SUCCESS INITIATIVE AT SDSU

At SDSU, you are a First-generation/first-gen college student if you are the first person in your family to attend college.

To ease what can be a challenging transition for students from communities where college-going is not the norm, the Division of Academic Engagement and Student Achievement (DAESA) works centrally to support first-generation college students and their specific needs.

SDSU offers an array of services and programs to meet the needs of first-gen students. DAESA's mission is to facilitate access to enrichment programs, as well as awareness of resources, and tools that will help first-gen students succeed, regardless of major or graduate program.

Our goals are to:

- Assist first-gen students across the university in building community by meeting other first-gen students (undergraduate and graduate).
- Connect first-gen students to faculty mentors and/or fac-staff first-gen advocates.
- Utilize a strengths based mentoring approach in guiding first-gen students to engage in high impact practices (e.g. internships, service-learning, undergraduate research) and in understanding the intersection of their identities which influence their career/professional goals.
- Increase the number of first-generation college students who participate in the broader honors community, including the Weber Honors College, interdisciplinary honors societies and/or single discipline honors societies.

About

The Language Acquisition Resource Center (LARC) at the College of Arts & Letters at San Diego State University (SDSU) fosters effective teaching and learning of world languages locally, regionally, and nationally. LARC pursues this through initiatives involving research-based design and delivery of language and culture programs, teacher professionalization, and assessment.

We believe:

- Less commonly taught languages are an integral part of world languages education;
- Language teaching and learning are fundamental activities to a globally engaged and culturally aware society;
- Teacher professionalization and reflective best practices in language education are of utmost importance for instructors;
- Meaningful community engagement is essential to the work of SDSU, LARC, and all institutions of higher education;
- Articulation between K-12 and postsecondary education is vital for the development of professionals ready to contribute on an international scale.

LARC's staff comprises a diverse, multilingual team that collaborates with partners on and off campus to promote language teaching and learning in the domains of practice, policy, and research.

About

SAN DIEGO STATE UNIVERSITY
UNDOCUMENTED RESOURCE AREA

Our logo has several elements, all key and representative of the undocumented experience.

The three lines at the base represent transformation of the monarch as it starts small, growing and forming its wings. The green and blue tail of the “butterfly” to indicate youth/youthfulness, and the large wings to represent grown/maturity, family and community. As a whole, the feeling of togetherness is apparent in these shapes.

The red stylized wing/heart shape begins the trio of shapes as they increase in size. Each piece stems from the same center and point in the same direction, representing origins and heritage. The red represents the struggles and pain, but is resilience allows it to form into its final colors of black and orange.

Further, the color display from left to right may be representative of the land (green), then the sky (blue) then this beautiful burst of color — to include red and black which speaks to our SDSU connection and the importance of community connection with orange (which can be associated with sunshine, freedom and success).

By extension, the shapes and multi colors may be interpreted to mean a gathering of people from different cultures, backgrounds, ages and points in their overall development and success.

We also see the shapes standing next to each other, which implies a sense of community, and coming together -where there is strength and unity. As we see the wing shape even appears to take flight moving forward -which implies resiliency, growth and movement - specifically forward movement with such a slight tilt toward the right.

This piece also is left intentionally open and free-standing form to convey migration, freedom, flight and future.

Finally, the logo is on top of San Diego State University Undocumented Resource Area signifying the strength our undocumented community has as it sits on knowledge and raises from there.

About

The Well-being & Health Promotion Department aims to enhance the well-being of SDSU students in order for them to achieve academic success and establish lifelong healthy behaviors and attitudes to reduce the risk for disease and injury.

Well-being & Health Promotion believes that students' health is an integral part of their academic success. A student's success can be derailed by poor choices that affect health and safety.

Often, alcohol and other drugs, reckless or dangerous behavior, and risky sexual behavior can lead to injuries, disease, legal trouble, and social circumstances that make continued academic progress difficult or impossible.

The department serves a preventative role to allow students to make more healthful and less risky decisions by:

- Helping create a healthy campus and community environment
- Assuring students know how and are motivated to make healthy decisions

We provide SDSU students with tools to succeed by offering health education to the campus community on:

- Alcohol and other drugs
- HIV/AIDS
- Medical referral assistance
- Nutrition, exercise and wellness
- Peer Health Education
- Sexually transmitted infections (STIs)
- Women's health

About

The Women's Resource Center at San Diego State University strives to provide a vibrant, brave, and inclusive space that educates, empowers, and advocates for womxn's rights. The Women's Resource Center (WRC) career staff and student leaders engage students in discourse and programs that help create a campus culture rooted in gender justice. The WRC team provides students with the tools and resources necessary to cultivate feminist leadership. The WRC partners and collaborates with faculty, staff, alumni, and community members, linking San Diego State University with the larger San Diego community. The WRC provides support to students facing gender-based oppression by creating an environment that fosters healing, intersectional feminist activism, and enhancement to students' academic, personal, and professional success.
